

Being a part of Malamalama for the past 7 years has sparked a life-long journey into the practice of sustainability, which was something I had never thought about before the time I spent learning hands-on at Kolealea/Malamalama.

It has been such an honor to be able to serve the organization for the last few years. Sylvia has built an extraordinary network of talented people that are dedicated to cultivating and sharing vital knowledge on how we can live harmoniously with our environment individually and collectively. Making the shift towards a mentality of sustainability was extremely rewarding in my own life and something I hope others can experience as well.

Whether it is handling website issues or writing copy for marketing materials, I know the energy I put into Malamalama will have a positive impact on several different levels.
